

PACE Community Charter

Our commitment

PACE is determined to be a good neighbour throughout the lifetime of all our projects. We build positive relationships with the local communities that we become a part of through our work.

We continually look at ways we can work with communities and other local stakeholders to support their aspirations. This means our projects can also make a meaningful contribution locally, as well as delivering affordable, low carbon energy for the whole of the UK.

Our principles

The commitments we make to support the local communities that we become a part of are bespoke to each site, and are based on:

the location and extent of the project

the local landscape and environment

the project's interaction with neighbouring residences and businesses

the needs of the wider community

All commitments are also subject to feedback received at public consultation and will be developed through ongoing engagement with local stakeholders.

How we deliver local benefits

For every site we take into account local considerations. We have a number of different areas we look to explore to provide the right local community benefits for each site. These might include:

Providing renewable energy infrastructure including solar panels for community buildings and electric vehicle charging points.

Working with business and charities to support local projects.

Providing social investment to tackle issues such as fuel poverty.

Creating recreational spaces including new footpaths and community allotments.

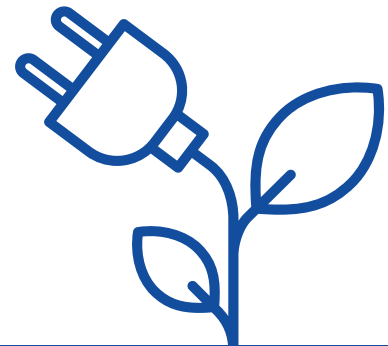

Landscaping enhancements to increase biodiversity and support local land management.

Within these categories specific benefits can be delivered but these will be different for every project and community. There may also be other types of local benefits we can support which aren't included above, and we are always keen to hear these.

We will develop detailed ideas for each community benefits strategy in discussion with the local community and other stakeholders to ensure we provide a positive, long-term legacy that benefits the local community for each project.

We intend to be a long term developer and operator, retaining control of all our projects. We are committed to removing each project at the end of its life, restoring the area to its previous state, and in many cases improving the quality of the land.
