The conditions requested for discharge do not relate to any outstanding archaeological conditions. However I do wish to raise the matter again that this this site does have a requirement for archaeological monitoring which is consistently not being adhered to.

The appointed archaeologist is not been given notice of commencement of groundworks which require archaeological monitoring, as per the condition. They are either not being notified at all or are been asked to look in trenches that have already been excavated, this is contrary to the approved archaeological specification. It is unlikely, under these circumstances that when and if a final report is produced that it will be adequate to recommend discharge of any outstanding archaeological conditions.
