Dear Sir /Madam

We are now 3 generations of the same family living in the same household. we require additional space in order to maintain an acceptable quality of life. I have taken advice from your pre planning office and considered various alternative solutions to enable this to happen. We have decided on the solution of a mobile caravan after weighing up all the options and perusing the advice received from the planning office to different ideas put forward. There will never be any intention to use the static caravan as anything other than much needed additional space for our ever-increasing family. I do believe this comes under permitted development as there is no material change of use.

To be clear, the application is for lawful use of the mobile home as an annex to the main dwelling by family members already registered as living at the property. There is a requirement for more space as our family becomes larger and older. As a family we are beginning to experience health issues which require the support of other family members within the family unit. Childcare and logistics are shared between all family members as are cooking and cleaning rotas. This solution has been agreed upon so we may continue to support each other into the future and give the younger members of the family a stable environment in which to grow.

Kind regards

Marcus Penta
