Heritage Impact Assessment

The Moulton Community Centre in Lincolnshire is a historically significant building with deep-rooted ties to education and community service. Established in 1881, the girls' and infants' school served as a vital educational institution for nearly a century. Following its closure in the mid-1970s, the building was repurposed as a community centre and is still continuing to serve the local population by providing essential space for social, cultural, and recreational activities. Managed by dedicated volunteers, it remains a lasting symbol of the village's educational heritage and community spirit, ensuring its historical and cultural significance is preserved for future generations.

Following this transition, a separate school was established on the site to accommodate girls and infants, later evolving into the village's primary school until the mid-1970s. With the construction of a new school, this historic building was transferred to the stewardship of Moulton Parish Council. This led to the formation of the Moulton Community Association, a charitable organisation committed to the conservation and adaptive reuse of this heritage asset.

Today, the Moulton Community Centre continues to serve the local community, providing essential space for social, cultural, and recreational activities. Managed by dedicated volunteers, it stands as an enduring symbol of the village's educational legacy and community spirit, ensuring its historical and cultural significance is preserved for future generations.
