Pub campaigners are urging people to support their locals during a 'challenging climate' after a ray of light for two closed establishments.

The Royal Mail Cart in Spalding will soon be serving customers once more while a crowdfunding bid has been launched to reopen The Bull Inn, Pinchbeck.

Chair of Fenland CAMRA (Campaign for Real Ale) Malcolm Phillips was thrilled to hear The Royal Mail Cart on Pinchbeck Road, is set to reopen later this summer, after closing its doors in March.

Malcolm, who has been a member of CAMRA since 1974, believes pubs are a vital part of the community and need fighting for.

He said: "It's great to hear people are still interested in going to pubs.

"Increased costs have made it much trickier for pubs to run and, as a result of the cost of living crisis, people can't afford to go out either – it's a very challenging climate.

"Pubs are the last socialising place in a lot of villages and need to be saved.

"CAMRA is running a campaign to save them from disappearing.

"A number of venues across the UK are now attempting to set up community groups to take over pubs and I think that should be applauded because, in many cases, it may be the only thing saving them."
