Under no circumstances should this application be approved.
The cleaning method put forward goes against all Historic England and War Memorials Trust advice regarding cleaning and war memorial conservation.

The method proposed shows that the contractor has no understanding of how to clean war memorials or care for heritage assets. The suggestion that bleach and Ammonium hydrogen dyfloride should be used and cleaned from 'foot of memorial working upwards' is completely especially concerning.

War Memorials Trust recommends South Holland District Council contact the trust's conservation team as soon as possible to receive free advice and discuss conservation best practice for the cleaning of the memorial.
