the other hand, the results of the present study are consistent with the general consensus in the field that the use of the term "disability" is not appropriate for the description of the condition of people with mental health problems. The use of the term "disability" is not only stigmatizing, but it also implies that people with mental health problems are incapable of leading a normal life. The use of the term "disability" is also inconsistent with the current understanding of mental health problems as a condition that can be managed and treated, rather than a permanent state.
