Investment will enhance service

Leading security provider GBSG Ltd has announced a major investment in civil engineering infrastructure and manpower to enhance its capabilities in the fast growing renewable energy sector.

The investment comes as part of the Spalding firm ongoing commitment to delivering end-to-end, high performance renewable energy security solutions for solar farms, battery storage facilities and other green infrastructure projects throughout the UK.

Neil Jackson, MD, said: "As the renewable energy sector accelerates so do the complexities of protecting these sites and their vital assets.

"Our investment ensures we can rapidly deploy, install and maintain advanced renewable energy security systems on remote sites where these projects typically are."

The company has expanded its fleet of machinery including trenchers, diggers and plant machinery to enable the team to deliver the essential groundwork required for CCTV, perimeter detection systems and other embedded security infrastructure. It is hoped that the improvements in infrastructure will enable GBSG to reduce installation timeframes, cut dependency on third party suppliers and improve the overall quality of work carried out.

With over 300 solar farms already protected, GBSG is widely recognised as one of the UK's leading security specialists for the renewables sector.

The company offers temporary rapid deployment security and permanent security systems including remote monitoring and guarding.

"It's not just about cameras anymore," said Neil.

"Our renewables clients expect us to understand the engineering context and deliver solutions that work within the landscape and the environment. This investment gives us the capability to do this and at scale."

New business support group

A long established business support group, The Business Community, has come to Spalding.

Business owners will be getting together once a month at The Cley Hall Hotel to network, share ideas and pass referrals.

The Business Community started over a decade ago after founder Paul Green decided he wanted to do more to help local businesses.

The group has grown and now offers a range of meetings including virtual online and face to face.

Members can go to any event and meet people in new locations.

One unique aspect is that where most groups 'lock out' similar businesses, The Business Community (known affectionately as BusComm) has no such restrictions.

One of the aspects of BusComm is the support available to new business as well as existing ones.

Members act as mentors, provide free training, or take part in the 'ask the expert' service where they will give other members a consultation around their specialist areas.

Each business does a brief introduction before a discussion around a monthly business topic, a one to one where you get to know another person in the room a little better, an education slot where an expert member will offer practical business advice to the group, and an open discussion where members can ask the advice of everyone in the room.

Finally, there are acknowledgements for the business referrals and help given between the members.

Meetings are on the last Wednesday of the month. The first meeting is free, and then you can attend two more before you need to decide to become a member. There are no annual contracts, and you can stop your membership at any time.

Free online improvement event

Social media experts Specky and Ginge are hosting a free marketing event in Spalding.

The event, which takes place at the Cley Hall Hotel, on June 17, will help businesses boost their online presence.

Featuring two expert speakers, the event will provide invaluable insights into social media marketing and website optimisation, helping businesses attract, engage and convert their ideal customers.

Social media expert Emma Watson will help you learn how to leverage social media to grow your audience, increase engagement and drive sales with practical tips and insider knowledge.

Website expert Steve

Axtell will help you discover how to make your website work for you, from SEO and user experience to converting visitors into loyal customers.

The free event runs from 10am to 12pm but spaces are limited and must be booked at www.eventbrite.co.uk

All attendees will also receive a free gift.
