A PLAN OF THE TOWN OF SPALDING IN SOUTH HOL[LAND] LINCOLNSHIRE As Surveyed Delineated and Humbly Presented to the Gentlemens Society in Spalding by their most humble Servant John Grundy of Congeston Leicestershire [and] Surveyor and teacher of the Mathematicks &c. The Explanation of the Map or Plan Followeth

First the Scale round the Map Numbred I-II-III &c Shews you by Inspection the distance from one part of the Town to any other part in Furlongs Secondly t[he] next Scale numbred 55 110 160 &c shews you the distance in yards from one part of the Town to any part of the same. For if you fix your Eyes upon any of the Parallel Lines that cut the two Places you have a mind to know the distance of you need only Substract the lefser number from the greater Number and the Remainder is the distance of those two places in Yards. But if you have a mind to be yet more curious you may take the distance of any two Places with a pair of Compasses and apply them with that opening to the Scale of Chains and Links that is within the Map numbered 125 &c and it shews you the distance in Chains and Links of those two places but if you have a mind to know the distance in Feet Multiply the number of Chains (contained betwixed the said distances) by 66 (the feet in one chaine) and the Product is the answer in feet Thirdly if you have a mind to know the Quantity of any part of the Town you must count the number of Squares (contained in the said part of the Town) and account for the parts of Squares that are in the same, how many whole Squares they make then add them to the number of whole Squares and Multiply the Quantity contained in one of these Squares by the Sum of the Squares (contained in the said part of the Town) the Rectangle or Product arising therefrom is the Area of the same. Note each Square that is formed by the Parallel Lines all over the Map contains two Roods and two Perches Fourthly these Houses and Backsides marked with the caracter of 8 Towns are Freeholders Lands, the Rest of the Town is the Most Noble Prince Francis Duke of Buccleuchs. All other things relating to the Said Plan are explained within the Same Ano Domini 1752 Lord of the Manor of Spalding with it Members and Patron of the Gentlemens Society there
